Assignment 9

Life as a Coder

I entered the class with my hopes so high

A freshman who thought she'd give it a try

Life as a coder is easy they said

It is a skill you need they said

But they had never coded before

They didn't know what would be in store

For a girl who knew nothing about loops

She certainly found herself in one, oops

Then I decided to face Python the snake

But was afraid of assignments like earthquake

What seemed like years staring blankly at a screen

I went to the Perk in need of some serious caffeine

Now the semester has come to an end

And all of my work was well spent

Because now I can officially say

That I am a coder by day
