

Computer Science: Lessons

By: Talia Penn

I have never been good at computers
But in this class, I met my match

I felt like a foreigner who needed language aid
But it was difficult for help to find the act

Scrupulous nights studying with some crying in between How was I supposed to know what this F would even mean?

How my resiliency has grown
And my patience has too

For for loops and while loops
And lambda I wish I never knew

I grew to understand
And maybe even like just a bit

I still don't like computers
I despise trying to code

But nothing can reduce my pride when my program fits the mold

From this class I have taken strength, knowledge, and humbleness too

For I know I may not be great nor was my code perfect to you

But we
Learn the concepts and carry them further taking the punches in strides
Picking up lessons alongside of them
