

⑥ THE LOOP DIARIES:

a memoir by a `for` loop
(age unknown)

Day One.

They gave me a range.

zero to ten. Simple, they said.

"Just print a happy message," they said.

```
for i in range(10):
    print("hello")
```

Classic. But then some genius writes:

```
for i in range(9999999999):
```

Really? What kind of person needs a billion hellos?

you know who really needs help? `while`.

Poor guy... He's got no idea when to stop.

He's still running from 2007.

```
while not tired:
```

```
    keep going
```

He never breaks out of that toxicity.

Just stuck in a toxic relationship with `True`.

`continue` is worse. He'll interrupt mid-sentence and—

```
    continue
```

—there he goes again. Didn't even let me finish.

You ever met `else` in a loop?

Yeah... she's like the forgotten middle child of Python.

```
for i in data:
```

```
    if i == "Crisis":
```

```
        break
```

```
    else:
```

```
        print("we made it through".)
```

She's basically like, "Hey, since everything went fine, here's some bonus closure!"

Honestly, she deserves better.

Anyway, my life's an endless cycle.
Literally.

I'll probably be here tomorrow.
Running the same block.

⑥

Printing the same line.

And praying someone adds a break.
